First of all, I would like to welcome all of our honoree students, their parents, their grandparents, teachers, and the school administrators that are here today. Eighteen high schools are represented by the best of the best of our students in high school.

If you take a second, look at the faces of these students on each side of the gallery. They are the future of America, right here.

And we had a program this morning; our Majority Leader came and spoke to them, as well as a representative from Siena College talking a little bit about the transition from high school to college life.

And when we're done here, we're going to feed them and they're going to have pictures, we're going to take them on a tour.

And I would say to the students I would hope that when you finish your education, you would come and stay in New York, work in New York, raise your family here. We need you to be here to keep our state strong and to keep America strong.

Thank you, Mr. President.

"RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution, suitably engrossed, be transmitted to the colleagues of Angelo Falcon at the National Institute for Latino Policy."

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Senator Rivera.

SENATOR RIVERA: Thank you, Mr. President.

First things first. If Angelo was around, the first thing he would say about the fact that we are speaking about him on the floor of the Senate is {sound of disgust}. You see, Angelo Falcon, who was a mentor to so many Puerto Rican and Latino activists, scholars, was somebody who cared little for pomp and circumstance. If you ever saw him, he was not -- he didn't necessarily iron his clothes that much, and he didn't necessarily worry about getting places quickly. But he was somebody who was incredibly astute, incredibly smart. In Spanish we would use the word tajante, which would be

He dedicated his life to finding data, to mining data in government. One of the things that he cared about more than anything else was participation of people of color, particularly Latinos, in public institutions, in government. He believed, as many of us do, that having the representation of -- as diverse a representation as possible in government would lead to better policy and to better government.

And therefore, he gathered data, he demanded data, he scoured data, and he gave it to whomever he needed to give it to. People who sometimes didn't like him that much -- because again, he was a cutting man who gave it to you just like he saw it. If he believed that you weren't doing the right thing, he was just going to tell you. People that don't like him, even those folks were forced to respect him.

It was kind of a sudden loss just a few weeks ago. And I remember that back when I started working in the Senate back in 2003, I worked in the Senate, as many of you folks know, as a staffer before I was a Senator, long before. And one of the individuals who was responsible for making sure that I am here, Lucia Gomez, who is -- was one of his mentees and used to work for the Senate, I took her job at who was then the Democratic leader's office, David Paterson. That was a while back. And one of the things that she suggested right at the beginning of my tenure was that I should go and sit with Angelo Falcon.

I went and sat with him in a dark office in the southern part of Manhattan, surrounded by books and papers, and he gave me this look that told me the only reason he was talking to me was because Lucia had suggested that he sit with me. He took my questions in stride, and he educated me about the work that he had been doing for years and about the work that unfortunately government wasn't doing to have true representation of Latinos in different levels of power.

And since then, I learned so much from him over the years. And more importantly, I worked with so many folks who respected him who were his mentees -- I know that some of my colleagues are going to share some of their experiences. But bottom line is that this person who we called guerrero, or a warrior -- who cared very little, again, for pomp and circumstance. He would -- like if he was still here with us and I told him I was going to do a resolution on his behalf, he would not come in and sit in the room. He would never have done that. He would have watched it from home and gone like {sound of disgust}, watched it halfway through and turned it off.

But there's many of us who recognize that without the advocacy that he made throughout his entire career, without the push that he made to government entities -- who sometimes still don't respond the way that they're supposed to, who still don't have the representation they're supposed to have -- it is individuals like him, who -- certainly a curmudgeon, he can certainly be described as that. But he was a wise one, and I'm going to miss him greatly.

I think that the Puerto Rican community, the Latino community, the advocacy community mourns for this man, who many of us again called a warrior, a guerrero. I think he's been an important part of who the Latino and Puerto Rican community is in the State of New York. And I will miss him greatly. I thank him for his efforts. I thank his family members for lending him to us as much as they did.

And I look forward to continuing his work and, based on the work that he's done over the years, to make sure that we never forget that government should respond to the interests of all people, and having a diverse workforce and a diverse representation at all levels of government is necessary and important. He taught me that, he taught many of us that. And I will miss him greatly.

Thank you, Mr. President.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Thank you, Senator Rivera.

Senator Sanders.

SENATOR SANDERS: Thank you, Mr. President.

I too must rise because sometimes we fail to recognize that some people are rising above and they're exceeding their bonds. And Angelo Falcon was one of those people who, by focusing on the Latino community in general and the Puerto Rican community in particular, Angelo aided the human community. Angelo aided all of us.

He was against injustice. He pointed it out and fought it, and if you didn't like, he didn't care. He really did not care. In fact, I suspect he took a special delight if you didn't like it, because he would tell you the truth in season or out of season.

And we all have benefited from people like this. And every community has these type of folk who, you know, will spend their lives trying to find and root out injustice and things of that nature. And I think that we all have a debt to pay to these types of every community.

So I'm just here to celebrate the life of Mr. Falcon and look forward to the next Falcon arising and -- falcon arising, hmm -- the next one that comes out and realizes that the work is not over. As long as there is injustice, somebody needs to do something about it.

So I'm grateful that he did, and I'm grateful that his family allowed it. And I look forward to greeting the next one, whatever religion, ethnic, race that they all -- or sex that they come in. Or faith. Or anything else that I have left out that they appear in. I look forward to it.

Thank you, Mr. President.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Thank you, Senator Sanders.

Senator Serrano.

SENATOR SERRANO: Thank you very much, Mr. President.

And I want to give my gratitude to Senator Rivera for bringing this resolution forward and honoring the life and legacy of a great man, Angelo Falcon.

He's a person who I refer to as a pioneer. In the Latino community, in the cause for social justice in our community and empowerment from a political standpoint, in ways that are representative of the communities and constituencies that have very large Latino population, we have pioneers, those who many years ago, long before I or Senator Rivera came into the world of government and politics, they were the ones demanding a seat at the table. They were the ones who, in the case of Angelo Falcon, was very professorial and encyclopedic in his analysis of data and using that to speak truth to power.

And I think that that is such a fundamental benefit when crafting policy. When crafting initiatives that are important to any community, but in my case the Latino community, having reliable data, having a reliable foundation of which to balance and create policy is of the utmost importance.

So I think it's so important that we give tribute to people like Angelo Falcon and pioneers like him who make it possible for people like myself to stand here as an elected official, as a State Senator, representing a community that has many challenges but has seen growth throughout the years. And I'm very grateful to him and to all of the pioneers for making that a reality.

And on a side note, Senator Sepúlveda, who could not be here, asked if I could convey his condolences to his friends and family as well.

Thank you, Mr. President.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Thank you, Senator Serrano.

Senator Parker.

SENATOR PARKER: Thank you,

Mr. President. On the resolution.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Senator Parker on the resolution.

SENATOR PARKER: First let me begin by thanking Senator Rivera for his very eloquent words. And I think that they certainly summed up the life and the personality of Dr. Angelo Falcon. And I also want to just associate myself with the remarks made by all of my colleagues on this great man's life.

Second, let me offer my personal condolences and prayers and comfort to the family. Because there's a lot of people who, although we're acknowledging his life as a scholar and public person, I'm sure there's people in his family who knew a very different Angelo Falcon and are now, you know, missing his presence. And so we want to be -- we want to acknowledge and say that we remember them.

Angelo Falcon, you know, was huge, obviously, in the Puerto Rican community, huge in the Latino community nationally as a scholar and as an activist and as somebody who you could always go to for information and knowledge about politics and policy. But he was no less important in the African-American and black communities here in the city. And he was somebody who deeply understood the notion of coalition.

And he was no more polite to me than he was to Senator Rivera, but he certainly made time, you know, to talk to me and to give me information. And my interactions with him and the times that I had the honor and the privilege to learn from him certainly were impactful to me.

You see that even within the context of developing, you know, the institutes that he developed. And I think there's two things to talk about in the context of these institutes. The first is to understand that he started institution-building in the academic sense for the Latino community before anybody ever thought to do it. And that's when you hear Senator Serrano talk about him as a pioneer. He was certainly an academic pioneer -- not that he was the first to develop Puerto Rican studies or Latino studies, but certainly one of the first, and certainly saw the importance of developing institutions that would live beyond him in developing that understanding.

The second thing that I think is critical is the transformation of the Institute on Puerto Rican Policy to the National Institute on Latino Policy, and understanding that as the Latino community has grown and has not been as dominated by Puerto Ricans as it was in the early years, that he became flexible and understood that for politics to influence policy, that in fact it wasn't enough just to be Puerto Rican, that you had to have a larger coalition.

That first coalition was with blacks, but then later on the coalition grew to other Latino groups. Right? And I saw that in his work and the things that he was involved in.

But his impact on the policy and the politics of New York City and this country is undeniable, it's significant, and it's transcendent. And so for those things we remember him and we honor his memory today.

Thank you, Mr. President.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Thank you, Senator Parker.

Senator Krueger.

SENATOR KRUEGER: Thank you, Mr. President.

I'd like to also rise to give a shout out to the family of Angelo Falcon. What an incredibly valuable member of our community he was for so many years.

I got to work with Mr. Falcon probably over 30 years ago on a report on poverty in New York City and its distribution and the impacts it was having. And I remember him educating me at the time that simply defining people as a community because their parents all spoke Spanish was the wrong way to recognize differences and commonalities among different communities in the city.

And he was always a staunch advocate for what he believed and a staunch advocate for using data to prove your point. And he taught many people, many, many important lessons and was a true value to so many different issues that I think we just see and understand differently today compared to when he started his work and his life.

So for his family and his friends -- and I'm sure that because he gave and was so committed to his work that there was a price to be paid by everyone else sometimes -- that it was not just spitting in the wind, it was actually having a real impact on how policies were understood and translated and the impact on real people's lives.

So thank you, Senator Rivera, for thinking enough to bring this resolution to the floor and reminding us all, those who knew Angelo Falcon and those of us who didn't, what a valuable resource he was to us all.

Thank you, Mr. President.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Thank you, Senator Krueger.

The question is on the resolution. All in favor signify by saying aye.

(Response of "Aye.")

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Opposed?

SENATOR CARLUCCI: Thank you, Mr. President.

We as legislators have to do everything possible to keep children and families safe, to keep firefighters and first responders out of harm's way wherever possible. But unfortunately, throughout our state we've seen illegal, unsafe housing plaguing communities, because unscrupulous landlords decide to put profits before people and put innocent children and families in harm's way.

That's why we have to pass this legislation, to allow our municipalities to really crack down on these unscrupulous landlords, to uphold local zoning and to uphold the integrity of the local code.

This legislation will allow municipalities to add unpaid code violations to the property tax levy in a certain time period if they have not paid and upheld their responsibility to uphold the code.

This is an important step to make sure we're keeping our end of the deal to do our job. While the first responders and firefighters are always there, running in in harm's way, we have to do everything we can to protect them, to keep them safe. And this legislation will go a long way in doing that, in cracking down on unsafe housing, illegal housing throughout our state.

So I'll be supporting this legislation. I want to thank my colleagues in the Senate for doing the same.

Thank you, Mr. President.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Senator Stavisky to explain her vote.

SENATOR STAVISKY: To explain my vote, Mr. President.

We recognize that there's a disparity between out-of-state tuition charges and SUNY in particular, but also with CUNY. And I think that this solution is something we've got to take a look at in the future, because SUNY has, in some areas, a declining enrollment. We've got to do what we can to encourage students to come to SUNY from all parts of the state and also from out-of-state students.

And I think a study should be undertaken to compare tuition costs in other states compared to New York. Our out-of-state tuition rates are very low.

I'm going to vote for this bill, Mr. President, but I caution I don't think this is the ultimate solution.

Thank you.

ACTING PRESIDENT GRIFFO: Senator Hoylman to explain his vote.

SENATOR HOYLMAN: Thank you, Mr. President.

I'm actually voting in support of this bill and wanted to point out that this bill would facilitate the establishment of a red light camera enforcement program in one of the sponsor's towns, of Wallkill.

You know, we're trying to do the same thing in New York. Senator Peralta has a very important bill, S6046B, which would allow New York City to install more speed safety cameras. It would allow the expansion of the speed cameras by 150 to the mere 140 existing school locations in New York City that have cameras, for a total of 290 locations.

My daughter goes to a local public school in Greenwich Village, and there was a terrible accident there just a couple of years ago. We don't have a red light camera or speed safety camera at the intersection of Sixth Avenue and 11th Street, and we should, to protect my daughter and the thousands of school students across the City of New York.

I vote aye. Thank you.
