WHEREAS, Formerly colonized for many years, first by the French and then by the British, the islands of Grenada still retain traces of these European influences in their culture, architecture and place names; its capital, St. George's, is located on the southwest coast of Grenada and is the seat of government and the main commercial center; and

WHEREAS, Before the 14th century, the Carib Indians who displaced the earlier population of Arawak Indians settled in Grenada; Christopher Columbus during his third voyage to the new world in 1498 sighted the island and named it Concepcion; and

WHEREAS, European settlement was slow to follow due to the fierce resistance of the warlike Carib Indians; the island remained uncolonized for more than 150 years although Britain and France fought for control; the French gained control of the island in 1672 and held onto it until the British successfully invaded the island in 1762 during the Seven Years' War and acquired Grenada by the Treaty of Paris in 1763; although the French regained control in 1779, the island was restored to Britain in 1783 by the Treaty of Versailles; and

WHEREAS, During the 18th century, the British established sugar plantations and slave labor was brought in from Africa to work on the estates; natural disasters in the late 18th century destroyed the sugar fields and paved the way for the introduction of other crops; cacao, cotton, nutmeg and other valuable spices were introduced and Grenada assumed a new importance to European traders; and

WHEREAS, Slavery was outlawed in 1834 at which the slave population had reached 24,000; national political consciousness took shape throughout the labor movement and Grenada joined the Federation of the West Indies in 1958; and

WHEREAS, When the Federation was dissolved in 1962, Grenada evolved first into an Associated State with internal self government in 1967; Grenada's independence was attained in 1974 and it became a constitutional monarchy, with a Prime Minister and Queen Elizabeth II as Head of State, represented by the Governor General; and

WHEREAS, Through their long and sustained commitment to freedom, the people of Grenada, Carriacou & Petite Martinique have so heroically advanced that spirit of united purpose and shared concern which is the unalterable manifestation of our shared humanity; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That this Legislative Body pause in its deliberations to
