S 2. Legislative findings. The legislature hereby finds that the state has recently announced its intent to downsize and close numerous facilities operated by the office of mental health and the office for people with developmental disabilities. These facilities provide inpatient services to individuals with serious mental illness or developmental disabilities who are very frail, who are dangerous or violent, or who are children and adolescents. The stated purpose of these closures is to achieve full community integration of the mentally ill and developmentally disabled individuals residing throughout the state in accordance with the Supreme Court decision in Olmstead. Olmstead v. L.C., 527 U.S. 581 (1999), is a United States Supreme Court case regarding discrimination against people with mental disabilities, which held that under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), individuals with mental disabilities have the right to live in the community rather than in institutions, if in the words of the opinion of the court, "the State's treatment professionals have determined that community placement is appropriate, the transfer from institutional care to a less restrictive setting is not opposed by the affected individual, and the placement can be reasonably accommodated, taking into account the resources available to the State and the needs of others with mental disabilities". The court also stated that "We emphasize that nothing in the ADA or its implementing regulations condones termination of institutional settings for persons unable to handle or benefit from community settings".

These closures would result in the loss of much-needed inpatient beds without adequate planning for community-based, state-provided alternatives. This plan also reduces innovative programs that include family involvement or behavior modification for the mentally ill and the developmentally disabled. For mentally ill and developmentally disabled consumers, their safety net has been cut. The termination of services to these individuals by the state will have a dramatic unforeseen impact by forcing state employees to move to new communities, disrupting care for fragile consumers, increasing incidents of individuals with violent tendencies to victimize children and others, the overburdening of hospital emergency rooms, and inundating local correctional facilities with many new inmates.

The legislature hereby finds that closure of these facilities is not required by the Olmstead decision and other federal mandates to achieve full community integration of the mentally ill and the developmentally disabled. The state will not achieve significant savings by shutting the doors of these vital facilities; unfortunately, there is a very significant chance the individuals being affected by these closures will turn up in our criminal justice system and/or health care facilities.

The purpose of this act shall be to postpone action providing for the closure of facilities operated by the office of mental health and the office for people with developmental disabilities until April 1, 2015 so more adequate planning and collaboration can occur.
