AN ACT to amend the environmental conservation law, in relation to preparing a report on the economic impact of hunting, fishing and trapping; and providing for the repeal of such provisions upon the expiration thereof

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, REPRESENTED IN SENATE AND ASSEMBLY, DO ENACT AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Legislative intent. The legislature hereby finds that according to a "2001 National Survey of Fishing, Hunting, and Wildlife-Associated Recreation," recreational anglers and hunters spent more than $3.5 billion in pursuit of their pastimes in New York in 2001. The 1996 survey found that expenditures include monies spent for equipment, bait and tackle, hotels and motels, restaurants, lodges and camps, grocery and hardware stores, and guide services. The survey also found that these expenditures and their associated economic impact supported 43,000 jobs and generated $100 million in state sales tax and $32 million in state income tax in New York state in 1996. Nationally, the survey estimated that hunting and fishing supported 1.9 million jobs and generated $2.9 billion in state sales tax and $772 million in state income tax. The legislature finds and declares that hunting, fishing, trapping and wildlife-associated recreation support jobs, generate sales and income taxes, and are an integral component of the tourism industry and the overall economy in New York state. Efforts are underway in each state to promote tourism, including hunting, recreational fishing, trapping and wildlife-associated recreation in the name of economic development. The legislature also finds that the department of environmental conservation must rely on a study every five years by the United States Departments of Interior and Commerce to determine the number of people who hunt and fish and expenditures relating to their recreation. Therefore, this legislation is intended to provide more accurate and timely information to policy makers and department administrators regarding the tourism and economic impact of hunting, fishing, trapping and wildlife-associated recreation in New York state.
