AN ACT to amend the executive law, in relation to enacting the TREAT Act defining a bill of rights for juveniles in the juvenile justice system

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, REPRESENTED IN SENATE AND ASSEMBLY, DO ENACT AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. The legislature finds and declares that research based on national data from 2000 has shown that up to eighty percent of juveniles in juvenile justice systems have a nexus to substance abuse: 18.2 percent are under the influence of alcohol or drugs while committing their offenses, 53.9 percent test positive for drugs at the time of arrest, 12.1 percent are arrested for committing an alcohol or drug offense, 62.5 percent report having substance abuse problems, and many exhibit some combination of these characteristics; while forty-four percent of arrested juveniles meet clinical criteria for substance use disorder requiring medical treatment, only 3.6 percent of arrested juvenile offenders with substance abuse and addiction problems receive any form of substance abuse treatment according to the National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse (CASA); while up to seventy-five percent of all incarcerated juveniles have some diagnosable mental health disorder, mental health services remain scarce; that incarcerated juveniles have an increased need for basic and special education, but they are progressively left behind in systems that use uncredentialed teachers, crowded and inadequate facilities and which fail to create an educational environment conducive to learning and development; that juveniles who drink and use drugs are more likely to be arrested multiple times, with each conviction raising the likelihood of the juvenile being processed through adult court and subject to an eventual adult felony conviction, and such juveniles recidivate faster with more serious offenses than those retained in juvenile court; and that a substantial percentage of adults in prison for felony crimes were incarcerated as juveniles.

The legislature further finds and declares that, with comprehensive screening, the needs of juveniles can be identified and appropriate care provided while maintaining the safety of the community; and that, with appropriate care, juvenile offenders will recidivate less, and can become productive, healthy and law-abiding members of society. The legislature therefore declares that the provisions of this act are necessary to protect the public health, safety and general welfare. The necessity in the public interest for the provisions hereinafter enacted is hereby declared as a matter of legislative determination.

S 2. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "TREAT Act" or the "youth treatment, rehabilitation, education and training act".
