45 [4.] 6. The legislature hereby declares that, as a matter of state 46 policy, caring services and programs for seniors should be shaped by the 47 principles of strengthening independence, affirming dignity, and maxi-48 mizing choice, and a recognition that seniors and their families and 49 intimates provide a vast potential source of social, cultural, historic,
50 and spiritual enrichment and leadership.

51 The office shall enunciate these principles in the form of a bill of 52 rights for seniors, and shall, in addition to any other report required
53 by this section, report annually, not later than June first of each
54 year, on the progress being made in their advancement by state agencies 55 and local governments in the development and operation of programs for

1 seniors. Such report shall discuss progress in the following principles 2 with respect to programs for seniors:

3 (a) Seniors needing long term care in an institution or in an appro-
4 priate community-based alternative should be able to obtain such care at 5 an affordable cost in a timely manner from reliable and responsible 6 providers who can provide choices that meet the preferences of these 7 seniors, and who have the capacity to provide a smooth transition to 8 other forms of long term care when appropriate. Such programs should,
9 whenever possible, provide a continuum of quality health care, either 10 within a single institution, or through a consortium of providers.

11 (b) Public policy should affirm seniors' desire to maintain a high 12 quality of life by living with dignity in their own communities, by 13 supporting the efforts of informal caregivers such as family, friends 14 and neighbors who provide eighty percent of all personal care and 15 assistance to seniors.

16 (c) A goal of policy and programs in New York should be to help
17 seniors obtain or maintain affordable and secure housing that allows 18 them to age in place in their own communities with supportive assistance
19 and access to health related services in a manner that ameliorates prob-
20 lems of income, changes in family structure, health, threats to personal 21 safety, and architectural and structural inadequacies.

22 (d) Programs intended to offset excessive health care and prescription
23 drug costs for seniors, and to make health care, particularly wellness
24 and prevention programs, more affordable, should be designed to expand 25 choice and promote ease of access for seniors rather than to simply 26 provide ease of management and control for bureaucrats and program
27 managers.

28 (e) State and local policies and program guidelines should support the 29 most creative and flexible approaches to providing care for seniors, so 30 as to promote and sustain the autonomy and mobility of seniors, and to 31 tap their potential to enrich their communities.

32 (f) Seniors should be able to continue their productive lives in the 33 community of New York without fear of discrimination based on age, and 34 public policy should seek means of increasing opportunities for contrib-35 ution from these respected members of our community by supporting and 36 encouraging a healthy social environment that enables seniors to contin-
37 ue their productive lives if they wish, that affirms and encourages
38 their ability to achieve financial security, and that works to preserve 39 their dignity, safety, and independence.

40 (g) Public programs should promote personal security for seniors, 41 encourage personal responsibility of their families and intimates, and 42 recognize and build on the interdependence of all generations and the 43 diversity of our population.

44 (h) Public investment in programs providing health care and other
45 social help for seniors should be provided at a level which supports 46 public mandates with respect to these programs.

47 (i) No declaratory relief, injunctive remedy or monetary liability
48 against the state of New York or any political subdivision thereof, or 49 any public or private entity, domiciled or doing business in the state
50 of New York, or any employee or officer thereof, shall be created or 51 granted based upon the principles set forth in this subdivision, or upon 52 the enunciation of said principles to be made by the office pursuant 53 thereto. No claim for contribution or indemnification shall be created
54 based upon this subdivision. No assignment of claim shall be prosecuted 55 based upon this subdivision.

1 (j) Existing powers of the office for the aging shall not be changed
2 by this subdivision.

3 [5.] 7. Every state department, bureau, or agency or office shall 4 cooperate to the fullest extent possible in providing such data as the 5 office may need to assemble such reports, including recommendations by 6 the director to the governor and legislature.

7 S 5. This act shall take effect immediately.
