1 provisions of this paragraph. The court shall, however, retain
2 discretion with respect to child support pursuant to this section.

3 (5) Any court order or judgment incorporating a validly executed
4 agreement or stipulation which deviates from the basic child support
5 obligation shall set forth the court's reasons for such deviation.

6 (6) If a court of competent jurisdiction finds that sections relating 7 to child support in any agreement, stipulation or court order fail to 8 comply with any of the provisions of this paragraph, such sections shall
9 be deemed void as of the date that any of the parties raises this fail-
10 ure to comply in a pleading or motion or as of the date that a court of 11 competent jurisdiction makes a finding of the failure to comply, which-
12 ever is earlier. Any sections of an agreement, stipulation or court
13 order that are so directly connected or intertwined with a section
14 deemed void that they necessarily must be recalculated therewith shall
15 also be deemed void as of the same earlier date. Provided, however, that 16 the provisions of this subparagraph shall be subject to the terms of 17 subparagraph eight of this paragraph.

18 (7) If a court of competent jurisdiction finds that an agreement,
19 stipulation or court order fails to comply with any of the provisions of 20 this paragraph, the court shall issue a temporary order of child support
21 and schedule a hearing to determine the final child support order. The 22 final determination of child support shall be made pursuant to this
23 section de novo and shall be effective as of the date that any of the 24 parties raises the failure to comply with any of the provisions of this
25 paragraph in a pleading or motion or a court of competent jurisdiction
26 makes a finding of the failure to comply, whichever is earlier.

27 (8) If the family court finds that sections of an agreement, stipu-
28 lation or court order other than those relating to child support are
29 directly connected or intertwined with a section that relates to child
30 support that the court has found fails to comply with this paragraph, it
31 shall dismiss the proceeding without prejudice.

32 (9) The provisions of this paragraph shall not constitute a defense to 33 non-payment of a child support obligation prior to the date that any of 34 the parties raises the failure to comply in a pleading or motion or a 35 court of competent jurisdiction makes a finding of the failure to 36 comply, whichever is earlier.

37 (10) For the purposes of this section, a court of competent jurisdic-
38 tion shall be either the family court or the supreme court, notwith-
39 standing the court in which the agreement, stipulation or order was
40 initiated, unless the supreme court has retained exclusive jurisdiction
41 to enforce or modify the agreement, stipulation or order.

42 § 2. Paragraph (h) of subdivision 1-b of section 240 of the domestic 43 relations law, as amended by chapter 41 of the laws of 1992, is amended
44 to read as follows:

45 (h) (1) A validly executed agreement or stipulation voluntarily
46 entered into between the parties after the effective date of this subdivi-
47 vision presented to the court for incorporation in an order or judgment
48 shall include the following:

49 (i) a provision stating that the parties have been advised of the 50 provisions of this subdivision[7]; and

51 (ii) a provision stating that the basic child support obligation
52 provided for therein would presumptively result in the correct amount of 53 child support to be awarded.

54 (2) In the event that such agreement or stipulation deviates from the 55 basic child support obligation, the agreement or stipulation must speci-56 fy the amount that such basic child support obligation would have been

1 and the reason or reasons that such agreement or stipulation does not
2 provide for payment of that amount.

3 (3) Such provision may not be waived by either party or counsel.

4 (4) Nothing contained in this subdivision shall be construed to alter
5 the rights of the parties to voluntarily enter into validly executed
6 agreements or stipulations which deviate from the basic child support 7 obligation provided such agreements or stipulations comply with the 8 provisions of this paragraph. The court shall, however, retain
9 discretion with respect to child support pursuant to this section.

10 (5) Any court order or judgment incorporating a validly executed
11 agreement or stipulation which deviates from the basic child support
12 obligation shall set forth the court's reasons for such deviation.

13 (6) If a court of competent jurisdiction finds that sections relating 14 to child support in any agreement, stipulation or court order fail to
15 comply with any of the provisions of this paragraph, such sections shall
16 be deemed void as of the date that any of the parties raises this fail-
17 ure to comply in a pleading or motion or as of the date that a court of 18 competent jurisdiction makes a finding of the failure to comply, which-
19 ever is earlier. Any sections of an agreement, stipulation or court
20 order that are so directly connected or intertwined with a section
21 deemed void that they necessarily must be recalculated therewith shall
22 also be deemed void as of the same earlier date. Provided, however, that 23 the provisions of this subparagraph shall be subject to the terms of 24 subparagraph eight of this paragraph.

25 (7) If a court of competent jurisdiction finds that an agreement,
26 stipulation or court order fails to comply with any of the provisions of
27 this paragraph, the court shall issue a temporary order of child support
28 and schedule a hearing to determine the final child support order. The 29 final determination of child support shall be made pursuant to this 30 section de novo and shall be effective as of the date that any of the
31 parties raises the failure to comply with any of the provisions of this
32 paragraph in a pleading or motion or a court of competent jurisdiction
33 makes a finding of the failure to comply, whichever is earlier.

34 (8) If the family court finds that sections of an agreement, stipu-
35 lation or court order other than those relating to child support are
36 directly connected or intertwined with a section that relates to child
37 support that the court has found fails to comply with this paragraph, it
38 shall dismiss the proceeding without prejudice.

39 (9) The provisions of this paragraph shall not constitute a defense to 40 non-payment of a child support obligation for any period prior to the 41 date that any of the parties raises the failure to comply in a pleading 42 or motion or a court of competent jurisdiction makes a finding of the 43 failure to comply, whichever is earlier.

44 (10) For the purposes of this section, a court of competent jurisdic-
45 tion shall be either the family court or the supreme court, notwith-
46 standing the court in which the agreement, stipulation or order was
47 initiated, unless the supreme court has retained exclusive jurisdiction
48 to enforce or modify the agreement, stipulation or order.

49 § 3. This act shall take effect on the ninetieth day after it shall 50 have become a law and shall apply to agreements and stipulations entered 51 into on or after such effective date.
