AN ACT to direct the metropolitan transportation authority and the New York city transit authority to study aboveground transit infrastructure

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The metropolitan transportation authority and the New York city transit authority, in consultation with the department of environmental conservation and the department of health, shall conduct a study to examine and evaluate aboveground stations, elevated trestles, and elevated subway and railway tracks owned or controlled by the metropolitan transportation authority, regarding, but not limited to the following determinations:

(a) review past renovations to stations to determine the amount of lead paint abatement;

(b) determine the degree to which the metropolitan transportation authority complies with federal and state air quality laws and regulations;

(c) establish recommendations to further lead paint abatement, enhance air quality controls, and to ensure protection of public health and the environment; and

(d) determine the fiscal impact of any aforementioned recommendations.

The metropolitan transportation authority and the New York city transit authority, in consultation with the department of environmental conservation and the department of health, shall limit such study to a statistically significant subset of the aboveground stations, elevated trestles, and elevated subway and railway tracks to be representative of all aboveground transit infrastructure. Testing shall include all five
