appeal, adjudge such appeal meritorious or non-meritorious. Copies of such determination shall be promptly forwarded by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the person requesting the record and the agency making further denial thereof. Such determination shall state the outcome of the appeal and shall briefly explain the reasons therefor.

(1) If an appeal is determined to be non-meritorious, the person requesting the record may proceed pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subdivision. Proceeding pursuant to the provisions of this paragraph shall not be deemed a necessary condition precedent for proceeding pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subdivision.

(2) If an appeal is determined to be meritorious, the attorney general shall order the agency to provide access to the record sought. An agency aggrieved by such an order may bring a proceeding for review of such denial pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules; provided that no such proceeding pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules may be brought unless such agency shall have notified the attorney general and the person requesting the record of its intent to institute such a proceeding, in the manner prescribed for the service of a summons, within twenty business days of the mailing of the determination by the attorney general. The court may extend this period for an additional twenty business days for good cause shown.

§ 2. The executive law is amended by adding a new section 63-e to read as follows:

§ 63-e. Adjudication by attorney general of appeals for the denial of access to a record under the Freedom of Information Law. The attorney general shall review appeals for the denial of access to a record under the Freedom of Information Law pursuant to paragraph (a-1) of subdivision four of section eighty-nine of the public officers law. The attorney general shall prescribe such rules of procedure and forms as may be deemed necessary or convenient to the execution of the provisions of this section.

§ 3. This act shall take effect on the one hundred twentieth day after it shall have become a law. Effective immediately the department of law is authorized to promulgate any and all rules and regulations and take any other measures necessary to implement this act on its effective date on or before such date.
