Introduced by M. of A. WALKER -- read once and referred to the Committee on Governmental Operations

AN ACT to amend the legislative law, in relation to racial and ethnic impact statements on bills

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

1 Section 1. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "racial and 2 ethnic equity act of 2019".

3 § 2. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature finds that 4 minorities are historically overrepresented in the New York correctional population and that adverse racial disparities occur at every stage of the criminal justice system. Black people are dramatically overrepresented in New York's correctional population. In 2015, they accounted 7 for only 17.6 percent of the state's total population. Yet, as of January 2016, black people made up 49 percent of the total offender population under custody. Latinos are also overrepresented in the correc-10 11 tional population. In 2015, they accounted for 18.8 percent of the state 12 population and, in 2016, just under a quarter of the offender population 13 under custody. While the state of New York has effectively reduced the 14 total prison population through the adoption of alternative to incarcer-15 ation programs and other forms of diversion, the racially disparate correctional population remains an indefatigable aspect of the justice system. The role of New York State Permanent Commission on Sentencing is 17 to evaluate sentencing laws and practices and recommend reforms that 18 will improve the quality and effectiveness of statewide sentencing poli-19 cy; however, this entity does not evaluate the role of sentencing stat-20 utes on racial and ethnic minorities.

In New York State, black children are overrepresented at each stage of the child welfare process. Additionally, Black, Hispanic and Native American children have higher rates of involvement in each stage of the child welfare system than white children.

A plausible cause of the continued racial disparities is the enactment 1 criminal justice, public benefits, and social welfare legislation without review of the potential impacts on minority populations. 3 neutral legislation can have adverse disparate effects on minority groups in practice. New York State can remedy this through requiring racial ethnic impact statements for all legislation that will potentially increase the correctional population, create a new offense, change 8 the penalty for an existing offense, change the existing sentencing, 9 parole or probation procedures, increase the child welfare population, 10 and change social service laws as they relate to access to public assistance. 11

- § 3. The legislative law is amended by adding three new sections 52-a, 12 13 52-b and 52-c to read as follows:
