Introduced by COMMITTEE ON RULES -- (at request of M. of A. Mosley, Barron, Blake, Epstein, Simon, Wright) -- read once and referred to the Committee on Education

AN ACT to amend the education law, in relation to admission to the specialized high schools in the city of New York

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

1 Section 1. Legislative findings. Since the enactment of the Hecht-Calandra Act in 1971, the New York city school district has not been able 2 to make decisions about admissions to its specialized high schools.
3 Instead, as a result of the Hecht-Calandra Act, the city school district
4 has been required to base admission decisions to its specialized high 5 schools on only one criterion for admission - a student's performance on 6 a single standardized exam. As a result of the use of this criterion, 7 known as the specialized high school admissions test (SHSAT), the 8 student population of the specialized high schools does not reflect the 9 diversity of the City's population. Whereas the overall percentage of 10 Black and Latino students in the city's public schools is approximately 11 sixty-seven percent, Black and Latino students only represent nine
12 percent of the population of the specialized schools. This disparity 13 hurts Black and Latino students and it also harms the students who 14 attend the specialized high schools, who do not reap the intellectual, 15 emotional and social benefits from learning in a more diverse environment.
16 Furthermore, the city school district is alone in its reliance on 17 a single metric to make admission decisions. Universities across the 18 country consider multiple factors when selecting their incoming student 19 body; selective institutions do not rely on the results of a single 20 exam. It is time for the city school district to follow suit and for 21 admissions to no longer be based on the procedures prescribed in the 22 Hecht-Calandra Act. This legislation will allow the city school district 23 to develop its own admissions criteria for specialized high schools, as 24 it develops admissions criteria for other schools within the district, 25 and ensure that high-performing and talented students across all five 26 boroughs have the opportunity to attend its specialized high schools.
