AN ACT directing the public service commission to study the feasibility and the costs of burying all or most of the electrical, telephone and internet transmission lines in New York state and to publish and deliver a report of its findings to the governor and the legislature, and requiring new electrical, telephone and internet transmission lines to be buried underground

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. 1. The public service commission shall conduct a study to analyze the feasibility and the costs of burying underground all or most of the existing electrical, telephone and internet transmission lines in New York state. Such study shall include an analysis of:

(a) the economic and environmental benefits from burying such existing lines; and

(b) the economic cost burden of doing so, if any, including an estimate of what the cost per utility customer would be, the number of jobs to be created to complete the project and a timeline for completion of the project.

2. In analyzing costs and benefits for the purposes of this study, the commission shall consider the varying geographical areas of the state and report separately on the impact particular areas might have on the project. The study shall also quantify the economic costs and benefits of burying existing electrical, telephone and internet transmission lines to utility customers and shall disaggregate the results by utility. The study shall calculate the cost per customer of the entire cost of the project statewide, regardless of where the customer lives, for the life of the project on a monthly basis.

3. Within one year of the effective date of this act, the commission shall:

(a) publish the report of its findings on its website in a location accessible to the public; and

(b) deliver a copy of the report to the governor, the temporary president of the senate, the speaker of the assembly, the chair of the senate energy and telecommunications committee and the chair of the assembly energy committee.

§ 2. This act shall take effect immediately.
