AN ACT to establish the Marshall plan for moms task force; and providing for the repeal of such provisions upon expiration thereof

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings. The Legislature finds that any relief and long-term recovery from the economic fallout of the COVID-19 pandemic must recognize the disproportionate burden mothers have weathered. Women, especially mothers, have faced the brunt of the economic challenges of the pandemic due to social barriers and policy failures that have been compounded by enduring racism and gender injustices, including the lack of care infrastructure, lack of family-supportive workplaces, and gender and racial pay inequities.

Women continue to face unjust gender and racial wage gaps, and are overrepresented in low-wage jobs, despite their gains in workforce participation. Asian-American and Pacific Islander women, particularly Southeast Asian and Pacific Islander women, get paid as little as $.50 for every dollar a White man makes. Black women make only $0.63 for every dollar a White man makes, and as a result may lose $946,000 in their lifetimes. Latina women earn $0.55 for every dollar earned by a White man, and as a result may lose over $1,100,000 in wages over the course of a 40-year career. Native American women are paid $0.60 for every dollar a White man makes and are murdered at 10 times the rate of the national average, even though financial independence and security can increase chances of escaping violence for these women. Women's wages are key to their families' economic security and survival. Across the country, mothers are breadwinners in almost half of families with children under 18, even though mothers face a greater pay gap than women as a whole. Even prior to the pandemic, working mothers faced continued

EXPLANATION--Matter in italics (underscored) is new; matter in brackets [-] is old law to be omitted.

LBD10250-01-1
biases and stigmas in the workplace that caregiving responsibilities will negatively impact their work performance.

Women have suffered the majority of pandemic-related job losses. Since February 2020, women have lost over 5,400,000 net jobs and account for 55% of overall net job loss since the beginning of the crisis. Women of color are experiencing higher rates of job loss than White women. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics January 2021 unemployment data, the jobless rate for Black women and Latina women aged 20 and over is over 60% higher than their White counterparts. Asian Americans recorded the highest jobless rates among women in the last 6 months of 2020, even though before the pandemic their average unemployment rate was the lowest.

Women face a disproportionate burden of caregiving responsibilities. Mothers are three times more likely than fathers to be responsible for most of the caregiving and household work. Single mothers are more likely than other parents to take care of all housework and childcare responsibilities in their household, and are more likely than other mothers to experience financial insecurity.

Throughout the pandemic, women of color have played integral roles on the frontlines as essential workers, including as nursing assistants, home health aides, and child care educators.

Childcare is a critical lifeline for working mothers. Three-fourths of mothers with children under 10 say child care is one of their top three challenges during COVID-19. Throughout the pandemic, many parents have had to provide remote learning support to their children. 80% of mothers with children under the age of 12 have reported that they take the lead on supervising their children with remote learning. School closures have had a disproportionate impact on women, many of whom have had to reduce their work hours, take a leave absence, or permanently leave the workforce. Paid leaves help women and other caregivers remain in the workforce and supports both public health and economic recovery.

The unprecedented burdens of child care, work, and remote learning have strained mental and emotional health for mothers. These points of stressor are compounded by financial instability, racial injustice, being a single parent, having children with special needs, and many other factors.

§ 2. The department of labor is hereby authorized to establish the Marshall plan for moms task force to examine the following policy areas and issue proposals and recommendations thereon:

1. The viability and implementation of providing recurring direct cash payments to moms and other caregivers.
2. Implementation of a comprehensive paid family leave policy in the state for all employers.
3. Rebuilding and stabilizing the childcare industry in the state which addresses the lack of care infrastructure and child care deserts.
4. How to best revitalize and restore the role of mothers in the workforce through the COVID-19 pandemic and following recovery.
5. How to ensure immigrant families have the ability to access resources and support.
6. Solutions for the lack of family-supportive workplaces.
7. Expanding unemployment access to support New Yorkers who have to leave a job or work reduced hours in order to take on caregiving responsibilities.
8. Access to mental health support for mothers and other caregivers, which is essential to maintaining the health of the family.

§ 3. The task force shall be comprised of:
1. The commissioner of labor, the commissioner of social services, and the chairperson of the workers' compensation board of the state of New York, or the designees of such commissioners or such chairperson.
2. Two members appointed by the temporary president of the senate.
3. Two members appointed by the speaker of the assembly.
4. One member appointed by the minority leader of the senate.
5. One member appointed by the minority leader of the assembly.
§ 4. Within six months of the effective date of this act, in carrying out its functions, the task force shall hold five public hearings around the state to foster discussions among, and conduct formal public hearings with requisite public notice to solicit input and recommendations from statewide and regional stakeholder interests. The task force shall also accept public input in writing.
§ 5. Within one year of the effective date of this act the task force shall report its findings and recommendations to the governor, the temporary president of the senate and the speaker of the assembly.
§ 6. This act shall take effect immediately and shall expire and be deemed repealed 2 years after such date.