IN SENATE

May 5, 2021

Introduced by Sens. KAMINSKY, PALUMBO -- read twice and ordered printed, and when printed to be committed to the Committee on Environmental Conservation

AN ACT to amend the environmental conservation law, in relation to permitting kelp cultivation in underwater lands at Gardiner's and Peconic bays

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings. The state of New York has made a significant investment in combating nitrogen pollution, low dissolved oxygen, harmful algal blooms and a variety of other water quality impairments that threaten our coastal waters and fisheries and human health.

Kelp, which is native to New York waters, plays an important role in the fight to restore the health of our waterways. Kelp acts as a natural sink for carbon and nitrogen in our bays while increasing oxygen levels and reducing acidification. Kelp serves as a natural habitat for fish and shellfish in the state's waters. As New York continues to fight climate change and nitrogen pollution, sustainable kelp farming can provide substantial environmental benefits for the state. Kelp farming has a very low environmental impact footprint, requiring no additional water or fertilizer use, but yields a valuable product.

In addition to the environmental benefits, there are economic benefits for New York state by entering the emerging kelp farming market. Kelp is an edible and nutritious food with a growing market. It is also utilized in cosmetic and personal care products and used in fertilizer and animal feed.

20 States including Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, and Rhode Island 21 have already established kelp and commercial seaweed aquaculture 22 programs. In New York, there is an opportunity to promote this industry
