

STATE OF NEW YORK

2021-2022 Regular Sessions

IN SENATE

June 7, 2021

Introduced by Sen. BRISPORT -- read twice and ordered printed, and when printed to be committed to the Committee on Rules

AN ACT to acknowledge the fundamental injustice, cruelty, brutality and inhumanity of slavery in the city of New York and the state of New York; to establish the New York state community commission on reparations remedies, to examine the institution of slavery, subsequently de jure and de facto racial and economic discrimination against African-Americans, and the impact of these forces on living African-Americans and to make determinations regarding compensation; and providing for the repeal of such provisions upon expiration thereof

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

1 Section 1. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "New York
2 state community commission on reparations remedies".
3 § 2. Legislative intent. Contrary to what many people believe, slav-
4 ery was not just a southern institution. Prior to the American Revo-
5 lution, there were more enslaved Africans in New York City than in any 6 other city except Charleston, South Carolina. During this period, slaves
7 accounted for 20% of the population of New York and approximately 40% of 8 colonial New York's households owned slaves. These slaves were an inte-
9 gral part of the population which settled and developed what we now know
10 as the state of New York.
11 The first slaves arrived in New Amsterdam, a Dutch settlement estab-
12 lished at the southern tip of Manhattan Island, around 1627. These 13 enslaved Africans did not belong to individuals, but worked for the 14 Dutch West India Company. The Dutch East India Company had established 15 Fort Amsterdam, a fortification located on the southern tip of the 16 island of Manhattan, for the purpose of defending the company's fur 17 trade operations in the North River, now known as the Hudson River. In 18 1624, New Amsterdam became a provincial extension of the Dutch Republic
19 and it was designated the capital of the province in 1625.

1 These first enslaved Africans cleared forests, prepared land for agri-2 culture and built an infrastructure of roads, buildings and walls of 3 timber and earthwork, including the wall that gives Wall Street its 4 name. During the following years, more and more enslaved Africans were 5 brought to the New World for the purpose of expanding the settlement.

6 New Amsterdam came under English control in 1664 and was renamed New 7 York in honor of the then Duke of York, in whose name the English had 8 captured it. Three years later, the Dutch gave up their claim to the 9 town and the rest of the colony, in exchange for control of certain 10 trade routes and areas.

11 The change of control of the city did not deter slavery; it was an 12 enormously profitable enterprise and it continued under the English. New 13 York businesses engaged directly in slave trade and also in the 14 production of supplies used in the slave trade. They supplied food,
15 tools and grain to slave plantations in North America and in the West 16 Indies. Slave labor built and maintained ships used for trade between 17 North America, Europe, the Caribbean and Africa. Slaves produced goods
18 for sale and worked in private homes. Even newspapers benefited from 19 slavery: advertisements of slaves for purchase were a major source of 20 revenue for the papers during the eighteenth century.

21 Life was repressive for enslaved Africans in New York. The New York
22 City Common Council passed a number of restrictive laws designed at 23 curtailing the rights and freedoms of slaves. Slaves were barred from 24 owning significant property and from bequeathing what they did own to 25 their children. The number of people of African descent who could gather 26 in one place was limited. Restrictions on movement included requiring 27 slaves to carry lanterns after dark and to remain in certain geographic 28 areas.

29 Penalties for breaking these and other laws were severe. Beatings, 30 mutilations and executions were common.

31 Enslaved Africans refused to submit to the slave existence. The condi-
32 tions of their lives gave rise to rebellions and the development in the 33 city of a network of the Underground Railroad.

34 Not all citizens of New York agreed with slavery. A powerful aboli-
35 tionist movement developed, but the end of slavery in New York did not 36 come easily or quickly. Those who profited from the slave economy fought 37 to maintain the system.

38 In 1799 the New York state legislature passed "An Act for the Gradual 39 Abolition of Slavery". This legislation was a first step in the direc-
40 tion of emancipation, but did not have an immediate effect or affect all
41 slaves. Rather, it provided for gradual manumission. All children born 42 to slave women after July 4, 1799 would be freed, but only after their 43 most productive years: age 28 for men and age 25 for women. Slaves
44 already in servitude before July 4, 1799 were reclassified as "inden-45 tured servants", but in reality, remained slaves for the duration of 46 their lives.

47 In 1817, the Legislature enacted a statute that gave freedom to New 48 York slaves who had been born before July 4, 1799. This statute did not 49 become effective until July 4, 1827, however.

50 Despite these laws, there were exceptions under which certain persons
51 could still own slaves. Non-residents could enter New York with slaves 52 for up to nine months, and allowing part-time residents to bring their 53 slaves into the state temporarily. The nine-months exception remained 54 law until its repeal in 1841, when the North was re-defining itself as 55 the "free" region in advance of the civil war.

1 In 1991, a huge African burial ground was discovered in the heart of 2 New York's financial district during construction of a skyscraper. The 3 excavations that followed the termination of the construction project
4 yielded the skeletal remains of 419 Africans, many of whom were women 5 and children.

6 The slavery that flourished in the New York state constituted an 7 immoral and inhumane deprivation of Africans' life, liberty, African 8 citizenship rights, and cultural heritage, and denied them the fruits of 9 their own labor. Sufficient inquiry has not been made into the effects 10 of the institution of slavery on living African-Americans and society in 11 New York.

12 § 3. Establishment, purpose and duties of the commission. a. Estab-
13 lishment. There is hereby established the New York state community
