AN ACT to amend the executive law, in relation to the designation of "Srebrenica Genocide Remembrance Day" as a day of commemoration

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

1 Section 1. Legislative intent. This act arises from a sense of human 2 decency and respect for the Srebrenica people and their history. It is 3 the intent of this legislative body to designate July 11 of each calen-4 dar year as "Srebrenica Genocide Remembrance Day" in the state of New 5 York. Fifty years after the world said "Never Again" to the horrors of 6 the Holocaust, genocide took place on European soil. The name Srebrenica 7 has become synonymous with those dark days in July 1995 when, in the 8 first ever United Nations (UN) declared safe area, thousands of men and 9 boys were systematically murdered and buried in mass graves. The 10 victims, who were Muslim, were selected for death on the basis of their 11 identity; this was the worst atrocity on European soil since the Second 12 World War. During the Srebrenica massacre, more than 7,000 Bosniak 13 (Bosnian Muslim) boys and men were slain by Bosnian Serb forces in 14 Srebrenica, a town in eastern Bosnia and Herzegovina; in addition to 15 these killings, more than 20,000 civilians were expelled from the area
16 in a process known as ethnic cleansing. The massacre helped galvanize 17 the West to press for a cease-fire that ended three years of warfare on 18 Bosnia's territory, however, it left deep emotional scars on survivors 19 and created enduring obstacles to political reconciliation among 20 Bosnia's ethnic groups. Beginning in 1992, Bosnian Serb forces targeted 21 Srebrenica in a campaign to seize control of a block of territory in 22 eastern Bosnia and Herzegovina; their eventual goal was to annex this 23 territory to the adjacent republic of Serbia, and to do so, they 24 believed, required the expulsion of the territory's Bosniak inhabitants, 25 who opposed annexation. In March of 1995, Radovan Karadzic, president

1 of the self-declared autonomous Republika Srpska (Bosnian Serb Republic), directed his military forces to "create an unbearable situation of 2 total insecurity with no hope of further survival or life for the inhabitants of Srebrenica". By May, a cordon of Bosnian Serb soldiers had 3 imposed an embargo on food and other supplies that provoked most of the town's Bosniak fighters to flee the area; in late June, after some 4 skirmishes with the few remaining Bosniak fighters, the Bosnian Serb military command formally ordered the operation, code-named Krivaja 95,
5 that culminated in the massacre. The offensive commenced on July 6, 6 1995, with Bosnian Serb forces advancing from the south and burning
7 Bosniak homes along the way; amid chaos and terror, thousands of civilians fled Srebrenica for the nearby village of Potocari, where a contingent
8 of about 200 Dutch peacekeepers was stationed; some of the Dutch surrendered, while others withdrew; none fired on the advancing Bosnian 9 Serb forces. On July 11, 1995, Bosnian Serb military leader Ratko Mladic strolled through Srebrenica and, in a statement recorded on film by a 10 Serb journalist, said, "We give this town to the Serb nation. The time has come to take revenge on the Muslims". On the night of July 11, 1995,
11 a column of more than 10,000 Bosniak men set off from Srebrenica through dense forest in an attempt to reach safety; beginning the following
12 morning, Bosnian Serb officers used UN equipment and made false promises of security to encourage the men to surrender; thousands gave themselves
13 up or were captured, and many were subsequently executed. Other Bosniaks were forced out of Potocari that day through the use of terror; the 14 women, children, and elderly were placed aboard buses and driven to Bosniak-held territory, while the men and boys were taken to various 15 holding sites, mostly in Bratunac. The total number of men and boys who were slaughtered was initially a matter of some debate; under heavy
16 international pressure, the government of the Republika Srpska issued an apology in 2004 for the "enormous crimes" in Srebrenica and acknowledged
17 that an estimated 7,800 had perished. The process of locating the graves and identifying the victims was complicated by a well-organized effort
18 undertaken by Bosnian Serb forces in September and October 1995 to hide traces of the Srebrenica crimes; soldiers used heavy tractors and back-
19 hoes to dig up mass graves and moved the disinterred remains to distant sites, many of which were later located by U.S. intelligence experts 20 using satellite photographs. Furthermore, it required years of analysis by Western scientists to piece together exactly where the killings had 21 occurred and how the bodies had been moved among an estimated 80 mass grave sites; by early 2010, the International Commission on Missing
22 Persons, a nongovernmental organization established in 1996, had used DNA samples to identify more than 6,400 individual victims. By consistently 23 remembering and forcefully condemning the atrocities committed against these people, and honoring the survivors as well as other 24 victims of similar heinous conduct, we guard against repetition of such acts of genocide and provide the American public with a greater 25 understanding of history. This act declares that this legislative body deplores the persistent, ongoing efforts by any person, in this country
26 or abroad, to deny the historical fact of the Srebrenica Genocide; the failure of the international community to hold responsible nations 27 accountable for crimes against humanity results in travesty of justice, and sets a negative precedent. The state of New York endeavors to 28 encourage and promote a curriculum relating to human rights and genocide in order to empower future generations to prevent the recurrence of 29 genocide.
