1 wide variety of laws have been enacted to provide fairness in the 2 conversion of rental properties to cooperative and condominium ownership
3 and in the regulation and taxation of cooperatives and condominiums.
4 State and local laws and regulations are also designed to ensure that 5 the residents of such housing are provided with safe and habitable 6 accommodations.

7 Inevitably, disputes have arisen among cooperative and condominium
8 sponsors and developers, cooperative shareholders and condominium unit
9 owners, prospective shareholders and unit owners, boards of directors
10 and boards of managers. Such disputes often result in lengthy and costly 11 litigation and uncertainty as to the rights of the parties pending the 12 outcome of litigation. Such litigation diverts resources that could be 13 better utilized to provide affordable and well-maintained buildings and 14 grounds for the common good of the owners.

15 This article is necessary to provide a neutral, informative and acces-
16 sible resource available to all parties involved in residential cooper-
17 ative and condominium ownership and governance. The ombudsperson 18 appointed pursuant to this article will conduct outreach programs to 19 educate unit owners and board members as to their legal rights and 20 responsibilities. The ombudsperson will encourage alternative dispute 21 resolution when disputes do arise. The ombudsperson will be available to 22 provide dispute resolution services on consent of the parties. The 23 ombudsperson will also provide monitoring and supervision of cooperative 24 and condominium elections.

30 organized and operating pursuant to article nine-B of the real property
31 law for the primary purpose of providing residential housing to its unit 32 owners.
