5802. Establishment of the New York voting and elections database and institute.
5803. Function of the New York voting and elections database and institute.
5804. Co-directors and chairs on voting and elections.

§ 5801. Statement of objectives and legislative findings. New York's existing system of voting and election administration has developed over the course of two centuries and has evolved in response to changing understandings of civil rights and the importance of equitable participation in government. The legislature hereby finds that equitable, efficient, and accountable elections require transparency and reliable data to better inform the public and the legislative process in decision making regarding election administration and voting rights in the state. Therefore, the legislature finds that it is in the public interest to establish a central institution to reduce the burden on boards of elections, local governments and school districts with regard to storing and sharing election data, provide a nonpartisan and accurate set of data that the public can rely upon, encourage the enactment of evidence-based election policies and legislation, and improve transparency and allow voters to detect inequitable election policies and racial discrimination.

§ 5802. Establishment of the New York voting and elections database and institute. There is hereby established jointly within the state university of New York and city university of New York the "New York voting and elections database and institute", referred to in this article as the "database and institute", to maintain and administer a central repository of elections and voting data available to the public from all political subdivisions in the state of New York and to foster, pursue, and sponsor research on existing laws and best practices in voting and elections. For the purposes of this section, "political subdivision" shall mean a geographic area of representation created for the provision of government services, including, but not limited to, a county, city, town, village, school district, or any other district organized pursuant to state or local law.

(b) to organize interdisciplinary groups of scholars to research voting and elections in the state;

(c) to conduct seminars involving voting and elections;

(d) to establish a nonpartisan centralized database in order to collect, archive, and make publicly available at no cost an accessible database pertaining to elections, voter registration, and ballot access in the state;

(e) to assist in the dissemination of such data to the public;

(f) to publish such books and periodicals as it shall deem appropriate on voting and elections in the state; and

(ii) Election results at the election district level for every statewide election and every election in every political subdivision.

(c) Data on race, color, and language-minority groups. The statewide database and institute shall prepare any estimates made pursuant to this section by applying the most advanced, peer-reviewed, and validated methodologies.

One chair shall be within the state university of New York. One chair shall be within the city university of New York. The chairs shall also act as co-directors of the database and institute.
