AN ACT establishing the New York state commission to end mass incarceration and to prevent violence

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

1 Section 1. Legislative intent. The United States has the largest prison population in the world as well as the highest per-capita incarceration rate. In the United States, the crime rate is not much higher compared to that in Western Europe. However, the incarceration rate is three or four times higher even though the crime rate is lower than at any time since the mid-1960s, and the United States has incarcerated seven times as many people since that time while making up about five percent of the world's population, and has nearly twenty-one percent of the world's prisoners. African Americans are incarcerated at more than five times the rate of whites. The imprisonment rate of African Americans for drug charges is almost six times that of whites even while African Americans and whites use drugs at similar rates, and if African Americans and Hispanics were incarcerated at the same rates as whites, prison and jail populations would be reduced by almost forty percent. It shall be the policy of the state of New York to end mass incarceration and to deter violent crime for the purpose of justice and public safety.

17 § 2. A temporary state commission, to be known as the New York state commission to end mass incarceration and to prevent violence, is hereby created to investigate, evaluate and make recommendations concerning how to reduce the New York prison population and the incidences of violent crime in New York state.

22 § 3. (a) The commission shall consist of seventeen members, to be appointed as follows: nine members to be appointed by the governor, one of whom shall be the chair; three members to be appointed by the tempo-
