3. When a defendant has offered the defense of justification for the threatened or actual use of deadly force, the court shall instruct the jury that they shall not be permitted to consider the possibility of retreat as a factor in determining whether a person who threatened or used deadly force reasonably believed that the force was necessary to prevent death or serious bodily injury to such person or another.

§ 3. Section 35.10 of the penal law is amended by adding a new subdivision 7 to read as follows:

7. A person who is justified in threatening or using physical force against another person in defense of themselves, another person, or property pursuant to this section is immune from criminal and civil liability for any damages incurred by the aggressor pursuant to the application of reasonable physical force or threatened use of force.

§ 6. Section 180.10 of the criminal procedure law is amended by adding a new subdivision 8 to read as follows:

8. Upon arraignment, if a defendant offers the defense of justification to any allegation involving the use of physical force, including deadly physical force, the court shall dismiss the charges unless the

9 shall grant such motion unless the party responding to the motion proves 10 by clear and convincing evidence that the use of force was not reason-

22 action to recover damages for personal injury, injury to property or 23 wrongful death brought by an individual who committed a crime against 24 the respondent, where the injuries complained of resulted from a use of 25 physical force or deadly physical force by the respondent at the time of 26 the commission of the crime, the complaint shall be accompanied by a 27 certificate, signed by the attorney for the plaintiff, certifying that 28 the attorney has reviewed the facts of the case and that, to the best of 29 such attorney's knowledge, information and belief there is a reasonable 30 basis for the commencement of such action and that the respondent was 31 not justified in the use of physical force or deadly physical force 32 against the plaintiff.
