(c) No digital alteration shall add non-existent physical features or remove or conceal known material defects in real property without clear and conspicuous disclosure.

4. (a) A virtual tour shall not materially misrepresent, or materially interfere with a reasonable consumer's understanding of the layout, dimensions, or spatial relationships of a real property.

(b) A virtual tour that includes digitally generated, reconstructed, or conceptual elements that do not depict real property as it actually exists shall be clearly and conspicuously labeled as a conceptual or AI-generated representation.

(c) No virtual tour shall depict spaces, features, or configurations that do not exist, except where clearly and conspicuously disclosed.

5. The use or publication of a digital representation that is in violation of subdivision two, three or four of this section by a licensed real estate broker or salesperson shall constitute untrustworthiness or incompetency under paragraph (a) of subdivision one of section four hundred forty-one-c of the real property law, and the department of state shall be authorized to revoke the license of such real estate broker or salesperson, suspend such license, or impose a fine in accordance with such section for such violation.

6. The attorney general shall be authorized to enforce the provisions of this section as provided under this article.

7. The department of state may issue guidance or promulgate rules or regulations to implement the provisions of this section, including standards for disclosures and examples of permissible and impermissible practices.

8. (a) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit visual enhancements that do not materially affect a reasonable consumer's understanding of a real property's condition, features, or layout.

(b) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the use of digital representations depicting proposed remodeling, reconstruction, or new construction that does not yet exist, provided that such digital representations are clearly and conspicuously labeled as conceptual or proposed and not depicting the real property as it currently exists, and are not presented in a manner likely to mislead a reasonable consumer.
