§ 2401. Order when publication cannot be made. 1. Where because of circumstances beyond the control of a party required to publish, publication required by any statute, rule or court order cannot be made or completed in the specified place or newspaper in the required manner, the court may by order require such other publication as will not unduly prejudice any other party.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 1, if publication required by any statute, rule or court order has been commenced and cannot be completed because of the suspension or termination of publication by a newspaper, publication may be completed in any other newspaper which complies with the statute, rule, or order without further court order.
