§ 6232. College of Staten Island, New York city college of technology and Medgar Evers college programs. A. Notwithstanding the designation of the college of Staten Island, New York city college of technology and Medgar Evers college as senior colleges, the associate degree programs of these colleges shall be conducted administratively and academically in a manner consistent with the policies of the city university of New York applicable to such programs.

B. New York city college of technology (formerly known as "New York city technical college" and "New York city community college") shall offer two year programs in the business, health and engineering related technologies. For the academic year commencing September first, nineteen hundred eighty-three and thereafter, no more than ten percent of the freshmen shall be enrolled in programs leading to associate in arts or associate in science degrees.