§ 240.65 Unlawful prevention of public access to records.

A person is guilty of unlawful prevention of public access to records when, with intent to prevent the public inspection of a record pursuant to article six of the public officers law, he willfully conceals or destroys any such record.

Unlawful prevention of public access to records is a violation.